What happens after you've applied

Once we've received your request for support, we'll assess and determine your eligibility. We will advise you within business 5 days of the outcome of our assessment (usually much quicker).

If your application is accepted, we will work with you to find an assistance option that will work for you.

To determine the most suitable assistance for you, we may inquire about your financial situation and the services you require from us. For instance, if the financial challenges are long-term, we may ask for documentation and information that is relevant to your application. Some examples of the supporting documentation we may require are:

- Bank statements
- Income and expense statements
- Centrelink statements
- Medical certificates

For short-term assistance, or if you are a victim or survivor of domestic or family violence, we will not request any documents.

We may not be able to complete our assessment if the information we request is not provided or is incomplete. Providing information that is false, inaccurate or misleading this may result in your application being cancelled.

How we will assess and process your application

First, we will discuss your application with you and assess your eligibility for financial hardship assistance and request any information as required.

If you are eligible, we will work with you to agree on which options for assistance are suited to your circumstances. We will offer a solution for assistance based on the above. If you agree to the offered solution for assistance it will commence immediately.

What happens if you disagree with our assessment?

If you disagree with the result of a financial hardship assessment, you can seek a review through our Complaints Process. You can make a complaint by calling 1300 303 375 between 8am to 8pm Monday to Friday, emailing complaints@spintel.net.au or submitting an online request. More information can be found in our Complaints Policy.

If you are unsatisfied with the resolution of your complaint, you can contact the Telecommunications Industry Ombudsman (TIO) for impartial mediation by calling 1800 062 058 or visiting tio.com.au/making-a-complain. It is important to note that seeking assistance through the complaints process will not hinder you from receiving financial hardship support from us.
